

Biographies

Lisa Farbstein has lived in Fairlington Meadows since 1997. She initially served as a member of the Buildings and Grounds Committee, then transitioned to the Meadows Board of Directors, and has served as an active Board member for the past several years. Most recently, she has been instrumental in the installation of the Little Free Library near the playground. She also maintains the Meadows Facebook page. In addition, she remains actively engaged with both the Buildings and Grounds and Pool Committees.

Lisa is a communications professional and previously served as the chief spokesperson for the Arlington Public School system and the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority. She is currently the press secretary for a Federal government agency.

Anne Gillis was raised in Newport News, and attended college and taught high school in Richmond. She moved to Arlington in 1976, and to the Meadows in 1978. She worked as a community college administrator, and as a law librarian at the Environmental Protection Agency. In 1991 Anne joined the Congressional Research Service at the Library of Congress, as a research librarian. She is now retired and enjoys reading, traveling, history, genealogy research, and keeping up with her seven grand nieces and nephews. In April 2017, Anne was appointed to the Meadows Board to fill the unexpired term of a previous Director. She also serves on the Meadows Buildings and Grounds Committee.
